Dear ENT department

I am referring this patient for recurrent episodes of nasal obstruction over the past 8 months

Alongside, he complains of snoring and interrupted sleep, possibly suggestive of sleep apnoea.

She reports no injuries or epistaxis, however she has noticed recent weight gain and headaches

Past Medical History: Asthma; Allergic Rhinitis, High BMI

Current Medications: Salbutamol inhaler as needed; Cetirizine 10mg daily. She is allergic to Penicillin.

I believe an ENT evaluation would be beneficial in determining the exact cause of his nasal obstruction.

Warm regards,

Dr Turner
